grants and 6 deacons were on hand in charge of Captain James Claffin of South End station and with Police Superintendent Martin H. King personally supervising.

During the Cardinal's ceremony, traffic was detoured out of Washington street and around through Harrison avenue to the south and Shattuck avenue to the north. Tomorrow the cardinal will celebrate a solemn mass at the cathedral on the campus at Boston College at 10 a. m., and on Sunday he will celebrate a solemn open-air public mass of thanksgiving in Fenway Park at 10 o'clock.

50 YEARS A PRIEST

Fifty years ago today, the Feast of the Sacred Heart, William Henry O'Connell of Lowell, son of John and Bridget O'Connell, was ordained a priest in the basilica of St. John Lateran in Rome.

He was 24 years old, born on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, Dec. 8, 1889, and his birth-day and ordination anniversary fall six months apart in the day.

Today, priests representing all nationalities in the Roman Catholic division over which he presides, brought and spoke the blessings of their communications, and in the vast congregation filling the Cathedral were men and women of all creeds and faith, present to do him honor.

EARLY ARRIVALS

In the arrivals at the Cathedral were noted Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, wife of the former governor; Judge John E. Swift, of superior court; Mayor Mansfield; Mrs. Curtis Guild, widow of the former governor; City Councilor John L. Fitzgerald; P. A. O'Connell, Boston merchant, and Richard F. Terling.

Others included Bishop Emmett J. Connelley, of Lowell; Judge Joseph A. Kirby, state deputy; the Right of Columbus; Mrs. Joseph A. Tomassello and Cervetta DeAlbuquerque in Castro, the Portuguese consul in Boston.

The solemn mass of thanksgiving was celebrated by Cardinal O'Connell at 10 a. m., shortly after the same mass was celebrated in every parish of the diocese in recognition of the priest's anniversary.

At each of these parish masses, there was preached a sermon on "The Dignity of the Priesthood and the Sacred Character of the Power of Jurisdiction," with a reference to the Cardinal's accomplishments during his half century of service. Adults and children of each parish received communion at these masses and offered up their prayers for the Cardinal and a spiritual bouquet of good works was sent him from each parish.

In celebrating the pontifical high mass at the Cathedral, Cardinal O'Connell was assisted by the Rt. Rev. McGr. Richard J. Haberlin as deacon and the Rt. Rev. McGr. Michael J. Spillane as sub-deacon.

The Rev. Harry M. O'Connell, chaplain of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, acted as master of ceremonies. Servers were the Rev. Francis L. Phelan, chancellor of the archdiocese, and the Rev. Jeremiah F. Minahan, the Cardinal's secretary.

Music at the mass was furnished by the vested choir from St. John's Seminary in Brighton, where His Eminence studied for the priesthood before going to the American College at Rome.

One of the dramatic moments of the mass came when Monsignor Haberlin presented His Eminence with a golden chalice, the Golden Jubilee gift of the priests of the archdiocese.

In his address after the mass, the Cardinal paid a touching tribute to his mother who, he said, "through my infant and childhood years showed me the path of duty which led my feeble steps finally to the gate of sanctuary."

He paid tribute also to his teachers and professors in college and seminary, here and in Rome, "who so patiently and so wisely guided me through my student days," to the great pontiffs who have reigned since his ordination.

Children Will Honor Prelate

Tomorrow more than 20,000 children of the archdiocese are expected to attend the solemn open-air mass on the campus at Boston College at 10 a. m., with 500 children from parochial schools singing the responses.

Parties with hands or drum corps have been invited to send their organizations.

In the event of rain, the mass will be sung at the Cathedral at 10 o'clock.

Tomorrow afternoon, Harvard University will pay homage and respect to His Eminence, when he will be guest of honor at a musical festival in Harvard Stadium.

On the third and closing day of the Golden Jubilee ceremonies, the public is invited to attend the solemn high mass at the open air at Fenway Park on Sunday at 10 o'clock.

Representing the federal government will be Senator David I. Walsh. The state delegation will be headed by Governor Ely and the city by Mayor Mansfield and the city council.

On his predecessors and to his fellow priests for their encouragement and cooperation.

PRAYER ANSWERED
The spiritual strength of the Boston archdiocese is acknowledged, he said, "we can say that the prayer of Christ for the unity of His children has been answered in unmistakable terms in this, our own beloved Archdiocese of Boston, and my constant and never ceasing effort has been to minimize differences in a sublime unity and to see in all professing our holy faith, equally and alike, the children of our Heavenly Father and the brothers of our great Eternal Brother, Jesus Christ, our Lord, as that in every truth there may be one God, one Faith, one Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ."

In his address, the Cardinal humbled himself as to his achievements, giving all credit to Divine guidance.

"In years I have grown old in the service of God, in the God who rejoiced in my youth," he declared.

"Whatever of good I have achieved during my priestly life is due to the inspiration of God. The defects also are mine. Thus far God's mighty Hand has led me on."

"From day to day, from year to year, in such brief space as His gracious Providence may give me, my only wish, my only hope and prayer is that I may still learn to serve and love Him who has made me a priest. My eyes are closed in peace."

Eulogies of the Cardinal, in behalf of the priests and nuns and in honor of the Archdiocese, were delivered by Monsignor Haberlin and by the Most Rev. Bishop Francis J. Spillane, O.D., pastor of Sacred Heart Parish in Newton Center.

MANY SALUTE

Salutes in various languages were delivered by priests of the archdiocese preceding the Cardinal's address.

The Rev. Michael J. Houlihan of the Most Precious Blood, Hyde Park, brought a salute in Gaelic; the Rev. John B. Labadie of St. Joseph's parish, Salem, brought one in French; the Rev. Charles P. O'Leary, S. J., of Holy Trinity parish, Boston, German; the Rev. Simon of St. Francis' Seraphic Seminary, West Andover, Italian; the Rev. Francis A. Viramackis of St. Peter's parish, South Boston, Lithuanian; the Rev. John J. Guek of St. John the Baptist's parish, Salem, Polish; the Rev. A. J. Fumet, St. Anthony's parish, Cambridge, Portuguese; the Rev. St. Andrew's Our Lady of the Cedars, of Mt. Lebanon parish of Boston, Maronite; and the Rev. Peter Aboud, Our Lady of the Annunciation parish, Beirut, Syria Melkite.

This afternoon, Mayor Mansfield who attended the Cathedral mass, and a committee of the city council, headed by President John F. Dowd, were scheduled to visit Cardinal O'Connell and present to him the city council's act of resolutions offered Monday by Councilor Maurice Goldman, congratulating the prelate on his Golden Jubilee.

State and city dignitaries turned out to pay their homage to Cardinal O'Connell, Prince of the Holy Roman Catholic Church, as he opened his three-day observance of 50 years in service of God at a solemn high mass at the Cathedral this morning. has been done to make easier the building and owning of homes, but said:

"We must go much further before the desired objective can be attained."

That objective, he added, lies in enactment of the pending housing bill.

A special message to Congress carried the President's thoughts to Capitol Hill.

As a vital corollary to the home and security, the President placed development of natural resources of the country, with a view to regard for waterways and the soil, as a supplement to the recent communication in which he transmitted to Congress a number of departmental reports dealing with the use of waterways and the soil.

As such, much of it was devoted to a general discussion of what should be done to carry out the program.

FOR NEXT CONGRESS

The President promised to submit to the next session of Congress a mature plan for an orderly, national development of the country's great waterway and soil resources. Only through such a program, he pointed out, can American homes be located so that their occupants may engage in productive work. Speaking of this phase of his future plans, the President said:

"The extent of the usefulness of our great natural inheritance of land and water depends on our mastery of it. We are now so organized that science and invention have given us the means of more effective and effective attacks upon the problems of nature than ever before.

It is now possible for the government to appropriate a large definite, annual sum so that work may proceed year after year and not in the form of temporary expedients, but in pursuance of the well considered, permanent objective."

Going back to the subject of social insurance after outlining his natural resources development program, the President bluntly suggested action at the next session of Congress, he said:

"Next winter we may well undertake the great task of furthering the security of the citizen and his family through social insurance."

"This is not an untimed experiment. Lessons of experience are available from states, from industries and from many nations of the civilized world."

STATES SHOULD AID

"I believe the funds necessary to provide this insurance should be raised by contribution rather than by increase in general taxation. Above all, I am convinced that social insurance should be national in scope, although the several states should meet at least a large portion of the cost of management, leaving to the Federal Government the responsibility of investing, maintaining and safeguarding the funds constituting the necessary insurance reserves."

Mr. Roosevelt, in addressing his momentous message to Congress, took cognizance of those elements which he termed backward. Thus, he said, must be brushed aside the drive to a real betterment of the country.

"POOR BARREL" BANNED
The President explained his reasons for asking that social legislation be carried over into the next session in detail. He said:

"The rate of speed that we can usefully employ in this attack on the improvable and economic conditions must be determined by the legislative procedure. It would be absurd to undertake too many projects at once or to do a patch of work here and another there without finishing the whole of an individual project."

"Obviously the government cannot undertake national projects in every one of the 435 congressional districts, nor even in every one of the 48 states. The magnificent conception of national action and national needs that this Congress has built up has not only set an example of large vision for all time, but it has most congenially to obviate our ancient habit of pork barrel legislation. To that we must not revert."

FIERMONTE IS TIRED OF BEING JUST 'MRS. ASTOR'S HUSBAND'

SHE MARRIED

Fiermonte Confident

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.
New York, June 8.—"I'm tired of being known as Mrs. Astor's husband. She's Enzo Fiermonte's wife."

With simple Latin directness, the handsome young prizefighter who stepped into the front pages and the Four Hundred all at one stroke with his marriage to the former Madeleine Force Astor Dick, explained his decision to return to the ring.

Enzo Fiermonte smiled engagingly, with a flash of white teeth in his classic bronzed face, and talked of his plans to fight the colorful, but so-called illegitimate Maxie Rosenbly in the Madison Square Garden on July 10, for the light-heavyweight championship of the world.

And what did Mrs. Fiermonte, the former Mrs. Astor, do?

She smiled again, with the confidence of good looks and youth, and said:

"Well, honestly, she didn't like the idea at first. But everything's all right now."

"She's reconciled to it now. I think she sees my point. After all, you see, I'm a fighter. A man can't just live on his wife's prestige."

What's more, Enzo will begin his training Monday on the exclusive and extensive estate that Mr. and Mrs. Fiermonte have taken as their summer residence on Long Island's north shore.

Parade of School Cadets Jams Traffic -- Proud Parents, City Crowds Thrill to Marchers

17,000 SCHOOL
CADETS STEP IN PARADE

Thousands in Line of March Cheer Boys;
Reviewed by Ely

Thousands lined the sidewalks and cheered as 17,000 Boston schoolboy cadets marched briskly to the tune of martial music in their annual parade through the streets of Boston today.

The thousands of cadets made an impressive spectacle as they marched on the first time, three companies abreast, in columns of squads.

The seemingly endless wave of olive drab was broken at times by colorful high school bands and the intermediate school units with their brighter attire.

Only this line of spectators was on hand as the marchers left the starting point in front of English High School, but as the parade turned into Columbus avenue, the boys were greeted with the cheers of thousands, lined five deep along the sidewalks.

In Tremont street, the parade was reviewed by City Council President John P. Dowd, representing Mayor Mansfield, and other city dignitaries. Again the parade was reviewed in front of the State House by state officials and once more in Beacon street, near Arlington street, by Superintendent of Schools Patrick T. Campbell and members of the school committee.

Regular Army officers were stationed along the parade route under orders of Major General Fox Conner, commander of the First Corps Area.

The officers rated the cadets of each school for posture, soldierly appearance, discipline and other attributes of a military unit.

Novel uniforms of the various school bands were a feature of the parade and drew sustained applause from the spectators as the musicians passed in review.

For the first time in several years, the cadets were not reviewed on the Common. This was omitted as it delayed the progress of the march.

Gillespies Ready to Return Astor Ring

(This is the seventh in a series of articles relating some of the highlights in the lives of two of America's oldest and most socially prominent families, soon to be united with the impending nuptials of John Jacob Astor, Jr., and Ellen French Tuck.)

By PEGGY DOYLE

There are those who suggest, in the intervals between the babble about the much-discussed engagement ring John Jacob Astor, Jr., gave Ellen Gillespie, that the young man may be getting a puckish pleasure out of achieving koi-noor publicity for this Astor heirloom—or else.

It has been said that when Mr. Astor says he does not know how he will get the ring back, he is "kidding" the newspaper reporters—that no one knows better than John Jacob Astor what will cause Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie to unlock that vault pronto.

More than that, as less an authority than Cholly Knickerbocker says that when the true story of why Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie have not returned that greatly publicized engagement "sparkler" to John Jacob Astor is broadcast, everyone will understand—and applaud—the actions of the parents of Ellen Gillespie.

According to this celebrated society chronicler, the wealthy and prominent Gillespies gave a very definite reason for keeping the ring safely under lock and key in a vault Cholly, a day or so ago in the New York Evening Journal.

"I happen to know all about the engagement ring—but have given my word not to divulge what I know at this time."

"And I suggest to young Mr. Astor that he read the letters sent him by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie offering to return the ring. They contain all the questions and answers."

"The Gillespies are most anxious to be relieved of the responsibility of the jewel—and let's hope Jack's soon will write the letter the Gillespie demand, so that this publicity, which is most distressing to the Gillespies—but which young Astor seems to court—will cease."

When America's most eligible bachelor returned from his 30-day honeymoon trip, apparently in the "eyes" of spirits, he admitted to shipwrecked reporters that he took it all by himself rather than share it with "in-laws."

"People can sue for lots of things," he answered. "But she cannot sue me for she was the one who broke the engagement."

"However," he smiled, "we could have gotten along all right if parents hadn't interfered."

"Parents? Which ones?"

"Well, my father is dead. My mother was ill at the time of our engagement. I could not take the subject to her."

"Apparently, then, it was her parents?"

"Well, I guess it was," he said, "honestly, though, when it went so far that her parents were planning to go on our honeymoon trip with us, that was just too much. That was the end of everything."

(Tomorrow's article will tell of the deep friendship existing since childhood between Miss Ellen S. S. Gillespie, the Paris avenue debutante who joined John Jacob Astor, Jr., and Miss Ellen Tuck French, whose engagement to the young man, America's most eligible bachelor, has recently been announced.)

Alaskans Move to Get Tom Johnson

Fairbanks, Alaska, June 8 (INS)—Steps for extradition proceedings were begun by territorial authorities here today to bring to trial on a triple murder charge the man held by New York police and suspected of being "Blueberry Tom" Johnson, sought for 22 years in connection with a Yukon tragedy.

Johnson was indicted by the federal grand jury at Ruby, Alaska, in 1912, after a three years' search for him had proved fruitless.

The indictment charged him with the murder of Frank Adams, Marie Schmidt, alias "Dutch Marie," and John Holmgren, alias "Fiddler John."

Apparently, then, it was her parents?

"Well, I guess it was," he said, "honestly, though, when it went so far that her parents were planning to go on our honeymoon trip with us, that was just too much. That was the end of everything."

R. I. Holds Two on Attorney Protests Bad Bills Charge Marlboro Rates

PASCOG, R. I., June 8.—Rhode Island state police today arrested two men here whom they accused of circulating bogus $10 bills throughout the northern part of the state. They were Vincent De-lauro, 28, of Pascoag, and Marshall Guarnieri, 32, of Providence.

The State Public Utilities Commission was today requested by Attorney Weyliff C. Marshall, to declare null and void the new schedule of rates filed by the Marlboro Electric Company. Marshall holds the rates are a "flagrant" violation of the department's order

MILLEN JURY GETS JUDGE'S CHARGE

By WIN BROOKS

In the face and say you saw defense without foundation."

FABER CALLED LEADER

Abe Faber was the leader in the holdup of the Neodham Trust Company and the murder of Patrick Manahan Forbes McLeod and Frank Hadcock, Dewing said.

"Faber, not Murton Milen, was the leader. Murton Milen waited for Faber's order to kill and he got it."

"Iring Milen went out with Faber to plan the crime. Murton Milen wasn't even along. They had murder and robbery in their hearts. Now Faber hides behind his education and behind Murton Milen—yellow Faber," cried Dewing, swinging from the jury box to point to the cage.

TELLS OF OBLIGATIONS

Dewing smashed into the insanity defense with ridicule and scorn. For the first time in eight weeks of trial there was a trace of sob in his own voice as he brought his summation to its climax.

"I want you to bear in mind it was 15 weeks ago today when two officers of the law, in the uniform symbolic of the law, were moved upon by machine gun in Neodham. Those men wanted me of service. They gave their lives in service, moved down by these three men of the peculiar code—the code of gangsters and murderers."

"Society owed these men a debt, he defense claims. So they went to Neodham to collect it with a machine gun."

There were many wet eyes in the courtroom. Faber's parents sobbed. The Milen's father cried for the first time.

Iring Milen grinned. Murton Milen sneered. Abe Faber sat with his chin in his hand, head bowed, unseeing.

The claim of insanity Dewing blasted with withering scorn as he faced the jury.

"They're taken days and days in this court for the purpose of attempting to impose upon you a ridiculous defense," he shouted.

NORMA'S ABSENCE HIT

Of the failure of the defense to call Norma, Murton's bride, awaiting trial as an accessory starting June 20, the fiery little prosecutor made capital.

Norma Milen wasn't called. Why? They could have called her to tell about Murton. She lived with him. She married him. She's on this insurance policy in evidence. She could have told you about Murton Milen. But they didn't put her on.

Scharion resumed his argument at 10:25, talking to the jurors with his hands on the rail of the box. He argued that Faber's actions following the crime, his cooperation with the investigating authorities, were entirely inconsistent with consciousness of guilt.

CITES CONFESSION
In Abe's confession there was no effort of the defendant to absolve himself, argued Scharion.

"There was no instinct of self-preservation in Faber's act. Can you conceive he was of such high intelligence at that time that he was considering faking insanity? Oh, no—it was for him a nervous act. He had no realization of his crime."

ASSAILS DOCTOR

"The state," said Scharion, "had to bring in an outside psychiatrist to tell the jury to attempt to get you to send this man to the electric chair." He again bitterly assailed Dr. Miner R. A. Evans.

At this point Faber's father sobbed loudly.

"Mur Milen knew Faber was a sharpshooter. Mur Milen knew Faber was good in a machine. Mur Milen knew Faber was under his domination and that he could mould him like putty—like clay—to his mad will."

DEWING MAKES PLEA

District Attorney Dewing then started his final argument.

"Your verdict is going to be the verdict of the people, and unless some legal technicality arises that verdict will stand," he said.

"There is a war going on in this country—law against crime—and your service is as important as was that of our country's soldiers in time of war."

He told of the "Milen parade" of 24 witnesses brought in to tell of the "terrible conditions" under which the two brothers were raised.

"If these two were the imbeciles their counsel would tell you, he said. You think the school officials of Boston would allow them to mingle with other children?"

"They want Murton to take the rap but who had the baggage check for the guns?"—Iring Milen asked. He wanted Faber. He took that rap that society gave him and turned it against society. Now, that's what I'll all this talk about the debt society owes these defendants.

"Iring did his part in the crime. He waited here when Murton went to New York. This imbecile, this insane man waited here and when he got out he said: 'Come back, Murton, they have discovered something.' Murton came back and they went to the First National Bank and when he opened the door it was empty. They moved from Boylston street to Andover street and waited there until the broadcast and the subway took that nightingale trip to New York, as Mr. Harvey says you to believe it was a telephone tap. Iring went with him and so did Norma."

"She was the brains of this job? Who shot the guard at the gate when there was hesitation? Abe Faber? Who threw back the empty box and said 'Get him, get him' when Murton said 'Here comes a cop'? Abe Faber. The dominating Murton Milen—he waited for his orders and he got them from Abe Faber."

Plans for Norma's own trial as an accessory after the fact, Trust Company robbery and doubtless murder went swiftly forward, the date officially set as June 20, a week from Wednesday, at a conference between Judge Brown, Dewing and Hartley C. Cutter, associate of George A. Douglas in Norma's defense.

Runaway Wagon

Crashes Into House

Unable to stop the momentum of the milk wagon to which he was attached, a horse was dragged over the steps grade in Salem street, New York, was injured and the wagon damaged when it crashed into a house at 120 Bellingham avenue, Beverly. The driver was making a jump when the wagon started rolling backward.

HOUSE CONTROL LINK SUSPECT TO HUB KILLING

By Associated Press
Chicago, June 8.—A fight for control of Congress is the immediate definite objective of the Republican party. Assured by Henry P. Fletcher, national chairman, that many seats in the lower house could be won in the Fall election, the executive committee planned a co-ordinated attack on the Roosevelt "New Deal."

Results of Fletcher's first conference with party leaders shattered another Republican tradition. The National Congressional and Senatorial campaign committee will work for the first time as a unit to win the nation away from theories of the Roosevelt administration. The immediate goal is control of the House.

The vital task of winning back the agricultural West probably will be directed from Chicago, with a Western manager in charge. The National Headquarters of the party will remain in Washington.

The Senate refused to concur with the House in the recommitment of the bill establishing a Boston City Council of 11 members, elected at large, to the committee on cities. The bill now goes back to the House.

Her Life Saved by Costly Blood Gift

Frances Sparno, 11, of Quincy, was rescued from death through a blood transfusion from Fireman Clarence Metcalfe, who himself is now dying from a strange infection as a result of blood operations. Metcalfe was weakened, doctors say, by this and previous transfusions.

Lowell Eagles Install Officers

Gastano F. D'Allesio, Boston College graduate now studying at the Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore as winner of the first annual Charles J. O'Malley Family Foundation Scholarship in 1931 has been elected to Sigma Xi, national honor society, for science students, it was announced today. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Severino D'Allesio, of Dutton circle, Medford.

Quincy Man Fights for Life After Blood Donations

Clarence Metcalfe of the Quincy fire department, hero of two recent blood transfusions, today battled for his own life as a result of his gifts.

Metcalfe, 46-year-old father of six children, is suffering from an infection of one arm, caused by one of the transfusions. Doctors said the loss of blood in the transfusions weakened him to such an extent that he is having a hard fight to throw off the infection.

Less than a month ago Metcalfe gave blood and saved the life of Frances Sparno, 11, of Washington street, Quincy, who suffered a rare blood disease. He gave another to Nellie Luciani, 17, of Winthrop park, Quincy, the latter died from a form of anemia.

HURRICANE HITS SAN SALVADOR WINANT SILENT ON REPRIVE

By The Associated Press
New York, June 8.—An American Cable today reported it had been without communication with San Salvador office for last 36 hours, and that its office in Guatemala had sent unofficial wireless advice the country had been visited by a damaging hurricane. Martial law was declared after collapse of communication facilities, light and power lines and railroad travel.

The storm formed in the Gulf of Mexico and struck inland at British Honduras.

A hurricane in early June is considered by weather observers as highly unusual, since rarely do such disturbances form until July or August.

The sheriff said he hoped the governor would act before the escalation.

SHARKEY, RUTH AT AUTO SHOW

Jack Sharkey, former heavy-weight boxing champion, and George Herman "Babe" Ruth, New York Yankees' slugger, last night were among the thousands who crowded Boston Garden for the current exhibit of General Motors products.

Both of them said that they rarely go to automobile shows and therefore were especially interested in the display, which will be on view until Monday.

Along with other exhibit visitors, they filled out slips and dropped them into the barrel for a prize. They will be selected the names of the persons to be presented a Chevrolet tonight, and a Buick later in the week.

MRS. ROOSEVELT SECRETS BARED

By International News Service
New York, June 8.—Capable organizer of her affairs, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt set the major strenuous life or relax with a vengeance. Anna Roosevelt Dall declares in article in Cosmopolitan magazine, out today.

It is the story of the first lady, according to Mrs. Dall, that she has "never been sick in her life."

Mrs. Roosevelt, her daughter writes, maintains her health by vigorous morning exercise, including a brisk period of exercise, and swim in the White House pool.

At the Hyde Park home of the Roosevelts, however, Mrs. Roosevelt "relaxes with vengeance, steering away from guests to read, basking in the sun or taking long horseback rides."

Norman Davis Wins Arms Plan Credit

Geneva, June 8 (AP)—Efforts of Norman H. Davis, American delegate, were credited with having brought about a compromise plan expected to set the world disarmament conference into motion. Germany's return to Geneva is the main objective.

Lily Pons to Wed Man She Quit for 'Vagabond Career'

By Universal Service.
Buenos Aires, June 8.—Lily Pons is to marry the man whom she once said fate would never permit her to meet again.

The Metropolitan Opera star announced her engagement to Dr. Fritz Von Der Esche, ship's doctor of the German liner Cap Ar-con, and she added happily, "Following her divorce, Miss Pons frequently laughed aside reports that she would remarry. On one occasion she said:

"I have met a man I love in South America, but we shall never marry. My vagabond career makes marriage impossible. We divided it would be better to part."

FAMILY FIGHTS LEFT IN WAKE OF SWEEPS

While many winners in the sweepstakes on the English Derby are making and re-making plans to enjoy their suddenly acquired wealth, other families were racked today by disappointment and squabbling over division of the prize money.

Disappointment and the loss of sudden wealth as quickly as it had appeared on their horizon plunged three New York families into gloom.

The greatest disappointment was in the home of Frank Rotovnik, a junior, of East 6th street, New York, who expected he would receive $75,000 for his ticket on Eastern. John Heber, unemployed, was a partner on the ticket and they planned to split their winnings.

TICKET IS NEWS—But it now develops that the ticket on the winning horse is the property of Rotovnik's stepbrother, Frank Schmidt, of 42d street, Astoria. Schmidt signed his uncle's name to the winning ticket as he traveled frequently and wished to be sure he would hear the news in the event he won.

Careful checking of the serial numbers of the tickets have proved unquestionably that Schmidt holds the winning ticket. But that does not dispel the grief and gloom in the Rotovnik and Heber homes. Nor in the home of Mrs. Mary Zandano, a seamstress, who sold the ticket to Rotovnik and Heber. She expected $100 as a bonus for selling a winning ticket.

Squabbling about another family over a division of the winnings. Mrs. F. W. Hutz, of Little Smartwood lane, N. J., declares that she is entitled to a half-share in the $110,000 winnings of her daughter, Alma Hutz, former follies dancer, who held a ticket on the winner, Windsor Lad. She admitted that she and her daughter have not been getting along well lately but insists that she owns a half interest in the ticket. She claims that she is going to Ireland to collect her half of the winnings. The daughter has not been located but her brother, John Cunningham, of Longford, N. J., has lined up with his sister in disputing the mother's claim.

N. H. AUTO TRAP DISCLAIMED

Selectman Joseph R. Edwards, of Derry, N. H., one of the instigators of an alleged motor trap, came out today with a denial of the charge. "It is not fact," Edwards said, "to call our stationing of officers at this crossroads a trap. Both officers in full uniform have been in plain sight."

"We have been accused of setting the so-called trap to gain money but I can proudly say the town owes only $15,000 on a bond, and we have no need of raising money in the way charged."

Wife Hit by Black Cat, Wins Divorce
Media, Pa., June 8 (AP)—It was bad enough when her husband struck her with a candlestick, a cake dish, a coffee pot, a flour sifter and a floor lamp, Mrs. Florence McElroy of Upper Darby testified in domestic relations court. But, said Mrs. McElroy, when he slammed her with a cat—a black cat to boot—it was grounds for divorce. The judge agreed.

CURLEY FIGHTS FOR PARTY GUBERNATORIAL CHOICE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Fitchburg, June 8.—Former Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, fortified by the open support of James Roosevelt, son of the President, opened a typically aggressive campaign here in his battle to secure the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

The younger Roosevelt's adherence to the Curley cause, it was admitted by many of the leaders, has confounded the predictors that he would take no part in the contest until after the Worcester convention.

Like a bombshell, the Roosevelt announcement came as the former Mayor and four other candidates for the nomination were presenting their claims for recognition at a meeting of Worcester delegates in Fitchburg, presided over by Mayor Robert Greenwood.

With the exception of the former mayor, who has made no secret of his intention to run in the September primary, which he has the nomination or not, the prospective candidates agreed to abide by the convention's decision.

Those that attended and addressed the Worcester delegates in addition to Mayor Curley were State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Professor Frank W. Simpson, Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cam-

Ranks Cut, G.O.P. in Rally

With their ranks depleted through desertion of thousands of prohibitionists, who feel that they have been "baited" by the Republican party today enters into the preliminaries of its first pre-primary convention at Worcester.

Preliminaries will start with a meeting of the resolutions committee, under the chairmanship of Mayor Sinclair Weeks of Newton.

This meeting will be followed by the traditional "love feast" in the Hotel Bancroft at which Senator MacNider, former national Legion head and co-minister to Canada, will be the guest of honor.

Former Attorney General Jay R. Benton of Belmont, is slated to be chosen permanent chairman of the convention.

Lieutenant Governor Gaspar G. Bacon is supposed for the nomination for governor and former State Treasurer John W. Halpin of Greenfield, appears to have a clear field for second place on the state ticket.

Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook, who managed to survive the last two Democratic landslide conventions one of the greatest vote getters in the party, also will be nominated.

For the office of attorney general, state auditor, state treasurer and United States senator, there are many sharp contests.

The present attorney general, Joseph B. Warner, is being challenged by Representative Robert A. Bushnell, former district attorney of Middlesex County. In his statement revealing his responsiveness to the post, bushnell takes a vigorous thrust at Warner.

"It is in line with my professional belief," the statement read in part, "that it should not be political in the usual sense of the word. It should not be the subject of hatching and trading. It is the chief law officer of the Commonwealth. The increase in public safety, to my mind of the thousands of dollars that can be saved to the people, if it is properly run, is almost beyond description."

The contest for the state treasurer is a five-cornered. Candidates are former Associate Commissioner of Public Works Herbert MacDonald of Beverly, former Senator Max Ulin of Dorchester, Senator James H. Wray of Needham, Representative Richard Johnston, Boston, and Ted Topham, Lowell.

For the United States senatorship nomination, Robert M. Washburn of Boston, Judge Hamilton of Belmont, and Gardner Pearson of Lowell are continuing with the possibility that Bushnell may loom also in the race.

Then there is the state auditorship, in which Mrs. Elizabeth W. Pigeon of East Boston, a former member of the Boston school committee, is entered against a field of three men. They are Francis J. Lally, town treasurer of Belmont; City Auditor Chester T. Swanson of Brockton, and Oscar U. Dionne of New Bedford.

The loss of many ardent prohibitionists to the party was revealed by Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Congregational Church.

Dr. Conrad stated that no attempt would be made to go prohibition plank in the platform this year because the prohibitionists feel that it would be "utterly useless."

"Both parties have sold the prohibitionists out," he said. "They have deceived them ruthlessly. They have not kept their promises."

He admitted that the majority of the prohibitionists had formerly adhered to the G. O. P.

PARISH SCHOOL SPELLING BEE RACES FETTERED

By the SPELLING BEE EDITOR

Two enthusiastic assemblies were held in Boston parochial schools yesterday in honor of two brilliant pupils who were among the last six contestants in the elimination of the great Metropolitan Boston Spelling Bee involving Boston, Cambridge and 20 other cities and towns.

The pupils, to whom gold medals were belatedly awarded because of their splendid sportsmanship in New England's greatest spelling bee, were Harry Brown of the Our Lady of Perpetual Help school, Roxbury, and Dominic Herito of the St. Francis de Sales school, Charlestown.

Both talented lads were enthusiastically applauded by their assembled classmates.

HONOR SIX FINALISTS

In the final spill-down of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser's metropolitan contest six groups of 10 pupils were spelled down to reach the final spill-down of 100,000, competing for the Boston Metropolitan Spelling Bee championship and a delightful vacation in Washington, including participation in the National Grade School Spelling Championship held May 29 in the National Museum in the National Capital.

The six star spellers, who survived, exhibited such skill in competition and such sportsmanship, that it was decided to recognize officially the abilities of the five finalists.

COMPETITION FRAISED

The five excellent pupils took their surprise honors in perfect stride, in five impressive assemblies during the week. Each made a deft and appreciative response to the awards of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. They were delighted with the handsome gold medals, as well as with framed pictures of the six finalists standing before Miss Marion C. Gilman, prior to the last half hour of spelling elimination at the big Boston garden spill-down.

In the ceremonies yesterday Father Richard J. Quinn, superior of the parochial schools in the Boston archdiocese, presided, expressing pride in the conduct of the parochial students during the great competition and in the enthusiastic appreciation by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

GIRL THE FAMILY

Susan and Allen Vow Love for Each Other; Realizes She's Through With Wallace

CHAPTER XIX

"There's a fire in here. Will you come in for a minute? I want to talk to you." Susan turned toward the parlor and he followed her.

"Let's close the door," she said. "They're all asleep upstairs. By the mercy of providence none of the sleepers had been disturbed by the opening and closing of the doors and the tom-tom of the storm. There was not a sound from the upper regions of the house."

With the door closed and Allen standing on the Bokhara rug between the familiar fire-place and the old garnet-colored sofa, the snappy room became another place for Susan. An unusual feeling that she was in a dream where everything was happening just as she had wanted it to happen, came over her. The sound of the storm outside and the lateness of the hour seemed to shut herself and Allen away from all the rest of the world.

"I wanted to ask you not to look—the side door tonight," she said. "Anna's gone out to a party, and just before dinner she called up to tell me that she had lost her key—the key to the back door. I told her I'd see to it that the side door was left unlocked for her."

When she finished there was a little silence broken by the faint rustle of the fire. Then Allen spoke. "It's that you wanted to see to me?" he asked.

"To Susan it was as if he had said, 'It's that all you want to do is hear me tell you about it. He's always angry when he has to get up to tell me Anna in. . . Don't you want to hang your overcoat over a chair? It's dripping.'"

IN ALLEN'S ARMS

He shook his head. "I think the best thing I could do would be to go upstairs and get out of all this wet stuff," he said. But he made no move to go. He stood with his wet hat in his hand, looking at her.

"Susan," he said, using her name for the first time. "Susan—that's really everything that you wanted to say? His voice was very low. "Yes," said Susan and her own voice was thick in her throat. "You feel toward me the way I feel toward you. You wanted to want to talk to you."

Susan's throat tightened with more. "How could you couldn't," she said. "You don't know me. . . then why was he in his arms."

"How did I know it? How do you know anything? They were sitting on the sofa, on the floor, and their arms around each other's shoulders, their faces pressed together. "I knew I felt this way about you that first night when you looked at me in the mirror. I could hardly get myself out of the house. I wanted to tell you about it in love, or even married. That awful thought that I had been in a house where I have to tell you about it, like a chauffeur."

"If I hadn't fallen for you, do you?" Susan turned in the view of his arms and looked at him. "Any sane person would tell me that this is the best of all worlds. I have never known such a simple, Allen. We've known each other for fifteen or sixteen days—hardly know each other at all. We don't know anything about each other. We haven't talked to each other for half an hour, all told—except what you told me that love just doesn't pop into being like this, all at once."

"His arm drew her closer to him. "Sure did, though. No getting away from it. And that is there that you think you ought to know about me? I've told you that I'm a deputy clerk at the county court, and I'm a student lawyer. I'm a full-fledged lawyer, ready to support my wife if she'll be poor for a time and not mind it."

"THINKING OUT FUTURE" He added, "You see, I've been thinking out our future."

"But what about Wallace Stefan, the man I'm engaged to? He thinks I'm going to marry him in a few months." Susan's ring glittered in the firelight, and the jewels in his shirt at her like a necklace. "You'll have to tell him you aren't going to marry him, won't you? That's the only thing that if you're as sure as I am that this is the best of all worlds, that you'll have to tell him."

"They were silent for a minute after that, and in the silence they heard the iron gate creak at the sound of the walk. Someone began to whistle outside.

"That's John," said Susan, getting up from the rug. "I'm going upstairs before he comes in. Where will you meet me tomorrow, Susan? Tell me quick."

"The public library downtown," said Susan quickly. "Four o'clock all right for you? You'll better take a hot bath as soon as you get upstairs. I shouldn't have stopped when you came in, if you have pneumonia it will be my fault."

Some time during the night she was roused from her sleep by the sound of voices in the hall outside her door—Anna's and Allen's. She sat up in bed and listened. They kept on for a minute or two, but she could not make out what they were saying. They stopped abruptly and she heard Anna going up the back stairs. She felt that she had been on the third floor. She went slowly as she felt her feet.

Enjoy Some of Her Exuberance Duck and Fowl Top the Week-End Market Fare Novena Continues at St. Stephen's

From Martha Lee's Friday WASH. Post, muddled bowl is a good standby for the weekend menu. If you want something a little unusual you may have native ducks at 20 cents a pound and in O. F. market that we visited they will lend the breasts so that you may bake or broil them and have something that is a delicacy and quite a bit different for your Sunday dinner.

The hen can be broiled or baked at the same time as that there is absolutely no waste to this method of serving the duck. The market will also deliver these animals around Boston. We will be very glad to give you the name of the market if you will just call Martha Lee. Liberty 400, to take advantage of this extra offer. Spring lamb, the genuine 1934.

FORCED BY FLORENCE DESMOND

By Juliet Shelby

THERE IS MORE to taking a bath than just jumping in and out of the tub and feeling you've done your social duty for the day. A bath may be either beneficial or detrimental to your health and beauty. It is a wise woman who determines in what temperature of water she should bathe and who does not disagree from that temperature, no matter what heat or mood. Her beauty will reap the benefit.

Hot and cold baths are dangerous unless they are prescribed for you by a physician. So don't go dashing into either under cold showers this summer, or hot for minutes in a cold when you are weary, home fatigued and overheated, or in for a long time in water that is of bluer heat than your body temperature. Afterwards you may have no strength or why you have a headache.

To add delight to a warm bath, there is a pair of bath gels that make not only I've come back to the days when I floated freely in my bath. A soft, fibre brush that resembles in shape a delicate white broom, and a wooden bowl of scented soap that floats around on the water until you feel inclined to make use of it.

Then you wash around the brush and make the soap of the brush. Apply it all over your body as if you were going in for a sizzle there!

Rinses those who are showered as tepid as your bath water.

Eye Brightener

Good eye brighter is a good eye brighter that is harmless but really effective. My eyes seem to sparkle but of late years they seem to be dull and red-rimmed. I do not wear glasses and frequently at night I suffer from eyestrain under lights.

P. D. M. Arlington.

Answer: The best eye brightener is perfect health. If your eyes are tired, list inflamed, use a solution of boracic acid. Dissolve one teaspoon of powdered boracic acid in a cup of boiling water, cool and strain. The best way to apply this solution is with an eye cup. If there is the slightest suggestion of pus in the eye, apply your quack quickly to an eye specialist.

is very plentiful this weekend. The lamb leg at 27 cents and the fore at 35 cents. Beef is a bit scarce and the price is 10¢ up slightly, as we predicted a week ago or so. The vegetable market has many good buys to offer. Native asparagus is very excellent and is selling at three pounds for 10¢. Native lettuce, radishes and cucumbers are very plentiful to be used in the spring salad. Alien onions are just coming into the market. They are such a delightful addition to the spring salad. Those that we are the genuine imported ones and they have a delicious and sweet taste of flavor that is especially fine. New round sweet corn is selling for 8¢ a pound and is excellent for squash pie, although this is the time of year one generally thinks of having it.

Strawberries also vary quite a bit in quality. Some are very poor in the middle of the few days of warm weather we have just had. A few are very excellent. Cherries are still cheap and plentiful and plums from California can also be found in the stores. Blueberries are selling around 4¢ or 5¢—the first of the season. And peaches from California are $1.00 a basket. Here is a menu for Sunday dinner. We will be glad to send any of the recipes on request. Individual Jellied Vegetable Salad. Broiled Breast of Duck. Farley Potatoes. French Beans. Asparagus Hollandaise Sauce. Chevreuil Rolls. Watermelon With Brandy. Coffee.

THE LIFE STORY OF CARDINAL O'CONNELL IN PICTURES

FIFTY YEARS in the service of God. You see Cardinal O'Connell as he looked when a curate at St. Joseph's Church, Medford, in 1887.

AS HE LOOKED in 1892. He was then pastor at the St. Joseph's Church, in the West End. He was nearing his tenth anniversary as a priest when ordered to Rome.

BACK IN ROME. You see His Eminence as he was photographed when director of the American College in the Italian city, in 1894. He had formerly been a student of theology in this college.

A BISHOP. It was just following the elevation of His Highness to Bishop of Portland, that this picture was made. This was in 1901.

THE CARDINAL.—This photograph was one of the early pictures of Boston's noted churchman after he was made Cardinal in 1911.

CHURCH ACTIVITY.—The busy Cardinal shown here in September, 1928, at dedication of the new Immaculate Conception convent, Malden, assisted by the Rev. Ambrose Dore of St. John's church, North Cambridge.

ARCHBISHOP.—It was in 1907 that the Cardinal was elevated to the archbishopric of Boston. This picture was made about that time. His work in the see was rewarded with the red hat in 1911.

CARDINAL AT HOME.—He was made William Cardinal O'Connell in 1911. In 1925 this photograph was made of the Cardinal as he strolled about the grounds of his home along Commonwealth avenue, adjoining St. John's Seminary.

HIS BIRTHPLACE. In this modest house in the Chapel Hill section of Lowell, Mass., William Henry O'Connell was born on December 8, 1859. His parents were John and Bridget O'Connell. The Cardinal is approaching his 75th birthday anniversary.

CARDINAL OF TODAY.—This interesting pose of William Cardinal O'Connell was made a few weeks ago. His fifty years as a churchman is marked fittingly today. (Photo by Kriden Ksanjian.)

ALWAYS FRIENDLY.—Wounded war veterans from Chelsea Naval Hospital and Bedford Veterans' Hospital being entertained by the Cardinal. This photograph, made on July 11, 1930, was taken at the Marblehead estate of the church leader.

ROMAN LIFE IS LESSON TO YOUTH OF ALL CREEDS

TOP BY STEP TO REGITS BY WORK

vercame Illness to Graduate From Boston College With Honors; Deep Study Marks Entire Life

By DAVID F. EGAN

Fifty years ago today, at the picturesque American College Rome, a broad-shouldered, deep-chested young giant was ordered into the priesthood of the Roman Catholic Church.

He is still broad-shouldered and deep-chested, still young in spirit, deep-thoughted, still the sun and storms of the years he has lived, marching arm in arm with religion he loves, growing more with every stride.

Today, as the Catholic Church throughout the world celebrates a Feast of the Sacred Heart, it celebrates also the fiftieth anniversary of the entrance of William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of the Diocese of Boston.

Cardinal's Life Is Lesson to All
The life of Cardinal O'Connell is a story of inspiration to boys of all classes and all creeds, for by his way, step by step, after the hardest and most sincere of effort.

Born in Lowell, Mass., December 1878—almost 55 years ago—he entered the public schools of that city. In those days of long ago, showed little of the will to excel which characterized him in later life.

Neither pupils nor teachers could foresee the temperament of a boy, who later was to become a saint and it was not until his entry into the seminary, Edwin Lord, mulcted his mind and spurred on, that his character started to develop.

When he finally entered St. Charles College, near Baltimore, he was to find for himself a life of a cell, and he was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

Discouraged of Discontent
This would have discouraged one of less iron in his soul. It was the young man to become a saint, with a regime of self-discipline that was to be the source of his strength and his life.

He returned to Boston College, and he was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life. He was to find in the study of the Bible, the source of his strength and his life.

Rich and Poor of All Creeds -- They Stand and Wait -- Jubilee Blessing of Prelate

"My flock," as they are affectionately termed by His Eminence, stood with bowed heads outside the Cathedral today awaiting the pontifical blessing of the Cardinal. This crowd was unable to gain admittance inside the church as thousands turned out to pay desiring homage to the Prince of Church on his Golden Jubilee. Shortly after this picture was taken the Cardinal appeared and gave his blessing as the crowd knelt in reverence. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

Cardinal in His Review Praises 'Neighbors'

(For the Boston Evening American, Cardinal O'Connell prepared the following observations on the occasion of his Golden Jubilee as a priest of the Roman Catholic Church, observance of which begins today to last through Sunday.)

BY WILLIAM CARDINAL O'CONNELL

The years of my priesthood, many as they are, nevertheless are easily counted.

Not so easy is it, however, to enumerate all the graces and kindly favors and evidences of good will which I have received during that half century from my friends and neighbors here in Boston, where most of my priestly life has been spent.

Among these I reckon the many kindnesses shown me by the press of this city from the day I came to live and serve here until today. I have often been asked to make my point of view, not only in my own mind, but also in the minds of my friends and neighbors, as to the great privilege and happiness which has been granted me by the daily press of Boston, which has constantly, with the greatest kindness and generosity, printed, in a conspicuous place, the most important parts of my addresses and sermons; and then, back would come by the dozen, even from distant parts of New England, from people I probably shall never see or know, the most heartening sentiments of generous approval.

So that, in very truth, the press of Boston has made for me thousands of friends whose kind sentiments I should never otherwise have known.

For all this kindness to me, both on the part of the press and its readers, I desire today to offer my most cordial thanks, with the hope that I in my turn may have the opportunity to reciprocate their friendly consideration.

State Leader in Tribute

The sentiment of gratitude which today overflows my heart and soul and mind is so great that it is impossible to express in words the emotions which at this moment fill me. I am so grateful that I should have been chosen to be a part of this great jubilee, that I should have been chosen to be a part of this great jubilee, that I should have been chosen to be a part of this great jubilee.

THE GOLDEN HARVEST

To His Eminence, William Cardinal O'Connell, on the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the Priesthood
BY THE REV. HUGH F. BLUNT, LL.D.

Now praised be Christ, the Priest on High,
What blessed evangel He hears:
Another Christ has triumphed by
The golden harvest of the years!

The harvest gathered day by day
In whitened wheat-fields long and broad;
No toil too great his debt to pay
To Rome, America, and God.

Through fifty years the Living Bread
He broke upon the altar stone,
His sacrificial hands outspread
To lay the Victim at God's Throne.

Cardinal's Address Gives Thanks for Blessings

Following is the complete text of Cardinal O'Connell's address today at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, after the solemn high mass which he celebrated in opening the three-day observance of his Golden Jubilee.

"Fifty years are today, I had the great privilege and happiness which has been granted me by the daily press of Boston, which has constantly, with the greatest kindness and generosity, printed, in a conspicuous place, the most important parts of my addresses and sermons; and then, back would come by the dozen, even from distant parts of New England, from people I probably shall never see or know, the most heartening sentiments of generous approval.

So that, in very truth, the press of Boston has made for me thousands of friends whose kind sentiments I should never otherwise have known.

For all this kindness to me, both on the part of the press and its readers, I desire today to offer my most cordial thanks, with the hope that I in my turn may have the opportunity to reciprocate their friendly consideration.

The sentiment of gratitude which today overflows my heart and soul and mind is so great that it is impossible to express in words the emotions which at this moment fill me. I am so grateful that I should have been chosen to be a part of this great jubilee, that I should have been chosen to be a part of this great jubilee, that I should have been chosen to be a part of this great jubilee.

Children Pay Great Tribute

Probably one of the most impressive of the ceremonies attending the jubilee observance of Cardinal O'Connell will be the attendance at the mass in Fenway Park Sunday morning of 20,000 school children.

The spectacle is without precedent in the archdiocese. In addition to the children, there will be thousands of others, leaders in political and civic life.

Probably as close to the Cardinal's heart as any other phase of his religious life has been his interest in the children and development of the school system.

Throughout his diocese are schools which stand as monuments to his zeal in furthering education among the children.

Groups of children from schools of all parishes in the diocese will be in addition to bands and drum corps.

Indeed, a great debt which I owe to all the priests of this Archdiocese, both the dead and the living, who by their example and brotherly affection and devotion have made a task, which others would have been beyond my strength, both easy and agreeable.

My flock, as they are affectionately termed by His Eminence, stood with bowed heads outside the Cathedral today awaiting the pontifical blessing of the Cardinal. This crowd was unable to gain admittance inside the church as thousands turned out to pay desiring homage to the Prince of Church on his Golden Jubilee. Shortly after this picture was taken the Cardinal appeared and gave his blessing as the crowd knelt in reverence. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

U. S. Rushes Help as Rains Begin

Washington, June 8 (AP)—A warning that the drought will be a disaster, and a general appeal for aid prompted the relief administration here today to rush to the aid of the 125,000,000 program.

Rain drummed a dance of dollars on the stock and farm lands of the northwest today. Worth $600,000,000 one cooperative estate in Tokyo.

Dakota alone, the steady downpour flooded fields in nearly every section of the drought-stricken states of Minnesota and the Dakotas.

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The joke that made The New Yorker magazine famous is in danger of becoming outmoded. You remember how it went?

The mother admonishes her small son at luncheon: "Eat up your nice broccoli."
And the child replies, "I call it spinach—and to H— with it!"

Broccoli is still going strong, served with sauce vinaigrette or hot yellow Hollandaise, but one of our local scientists—since psychologists pretend to that holy name—is knocking the props out from under spinach. It seems hard—cool—ard—just at the time when Popeye has made spinach a household word. No child who has watched Popeye and the Gooz stuffing themselves on spinach in preparation for some horrendous encounter can doubt its efficacy.

And to see Popeye in the animated cartoons engulfing a large mass of sand and lead and immediately thereafter knocking some huge palooka into a row of pretzels is a sight calculated to make the least tractable infant about for a second helping.

So it is naughty of Dr. Abraham Myers, our noted neurologist, to tell the Massachusetts Medical Society at Worcester that spinach is o. k. for eating purposes and even useful, but that a child can be perfectly healthy without even tasting it. There's bad news for mothers and nurses and dietitians!

Seems reasonable, though. To paraphrase Robert Louis Stevenson in the manner of Ogden Nash—

"The world is so full of a number of things to eat, that I am inclined to believe that children who never even taste spinach can be not only happy as kings but thoroughly healthy and complete."

And Dr. Myers adds that to force a child to eat spinach against his will probably does him more harm than good. He can get his food values from other vegetables, such as potatoes, peas, beans and beets.

All of which sounds like good doctrine. It is quite possible that we are worshipping too blindly the gods of orange juice, tomato juice, leafy vegetables, roughage, and what not. There were kings before Adamantium. There were healthy and well-nourished children before the days of Dr. Holt, famous author of "The Care and Feeding of Children." Corned beef and cabbage, for instance, has raised many a sturdy policeman and fireman and hanger-throater.

But right here Dr. Myers and I part company. He adds:

"It is also bad to force the child to eat anything with great formality. Children's appetites are more important than children's manners. The child may be injured if he is forced to behave at table so formally that he loses a child's natural enthusiasm for food. Parents should let the child's table manners come second. Let them come when he gets to an age when they are more natural. Otherwise eating becomes a somber duty instead of a natural pleasure for the child and his appetite is altered and his health hurt as a result."

These latter remarks are, with all due respect to Dr. Myers, nonsense—a product of the larger modern nonsense which insists that pleasure is more important than discipline and that the second makes the first impossible.

Manners do not come natural to anybody at any time. They are the product only of training—animal training if you like, since children are little animals. Any public dining room will reveal to you many an adult who eats habitually with the unspiced enjoyment and the manners of a pig. As the twig is bent the tree is inclined. The child who does not learn table manners before the age of ten will probably never learn them.

A well-trained child—no, to use the new jargon, the conditioned child—will enjoy his food in a mannerly way, while another is making an unwholesome use of his plate of food and glass of milk, spilling it, speaking it over himself, refusing to touch this, yelling for more of that, being bribed and tempted to make a meal—and usually eating less than the quiet and mannerly child. There is no natural antagonism between happiness and training. The new educators and psychologists who try to set up that utterly irrational and meaningless distinction are merely making it easy for lazy parents at the expense of later trouble and shame.

Educated parents repressed, and with reason, the American habit of giving children indiscriminate nickels with which to buy candy, ice cream cones, tarts and pop, at any hour of the day or evening. But often an educated parent who takes the new gospel of childhood too seriously—and with no sense of humor—will allow a small child to indulge its own will or prejudice or temper until the child becomes a nuisance to everyone around. The second example of indulgence is just as tragic as the first.

Meanwhile the Italian women, who never heard of Dr. Myers, are to be seen everywhere digging up dandelion plants—the best of all greens—to be served with a bit of veal, plenty of cheese, hard bread and a glass of red wine; the immortal fave of the hardest people in the world.

HOUSEKEEPER FILES SECOND COURT ACTION

Failed to Keep Wednesday Promise, Says Mrs. Vaughan's Lawyer

Suffer It Woods, 55, of Brookwood St. Petersburg, Fla., was named defendant in a $50,000 suit of promise allegedly brought by Mrs. Vaughan, who has been in Boston home at the Franklin Square House.

Was the second suit brought by the Vaughan against Woods within a few years. The first was upon stated agreement to pay her a sum each month as his housekeeper. It was settled out of court.

Attorney John A. Elderly, who has acted for Mrs. Vaughan, filed an attachment against Woods, now in possession of D. William Leavitt and Edmund T. Vredenburg of 13 West street.

He said that Woods and Mrs. Vaughan mutually agreed to a friendship of several years and that the Brookline man failed to keep his end of the agreement.

He declined to discuss the present merits of the case, but said that Mrs. Vaughan was a woman of considerable character and reputation. Woods is the son of the late Edward Woods, one time a newspaper publisher. He worked for his father at one time, but since the war has been engaged in various enterprises. The property held for Woods by Leavitt and Vredenburg is a trust fund that was left him at the time of his father's death.

RACE HEARING DATE CHANGED

Senator George Moses of Vail today announced that the Senate Ways and Means Committee will hold the public hearing on the permitment of dog and horse racing bill next Wednesday instead of Tuesday as originally announced.

"The 'pros' and 'cons' will argue their side of the case in an ordinary fashion," said Senator Moses, "or else I will rap the gavel and call the hearing off."

It is expected that the hearing will be a heated one. The committee headed by Senator Moses includes the following Senators: Donald Nicholson of Varenham; Henry Parkman, Jr., of Cornelia; Sullivan of Worcester.

O. O. McIntyre DAY BY DAY

Los Angeles, June 8.—At Winnie Sheehan's the dinner guests included the Warner Baxters, the Bob Kanes, the Sidney Kents, Frank Lloyd, Janet Gaynor, the Raphaels and the Cobbs. The approach to Sheehan's Angelo Levine suggests. Pennsylvania avenue with cypresses. An Arabian Avlon transplanted.

Heeded into the modernistic bar for an aperitif, a bareseep out of the Gay 90's rubbed his hands expectantly. His over-Niagara mustaches and frozen wavelet hair in lion-tamers' roach were supplemented by a gates-ajar collar, a throat-cut red tie and a Montana diamond that rivaled the headlight of a O. O. McIntyre's Empire express.

Cobb, who used to accept assignments with Sheehan from Chapin in the brow old days of the Evening World, thought some former World man of such affluence should install a replica of Doc Perry's famous drug store. It was a hang-out of the O'Malleys, the Illins, the Clarks and other Fourth-estate nobles.

My dinner partner was Mrs. Gaynor, a slim mold of Dresden with a coiffure of rich auburn and artistic hands that would give the two Helens—Menken and Morgan—a twitch. Her eyes are copper-colored and she lives in terror of those pigmentary lapses called freckles. Even decollete, she suggested a sunbonnety swing on the garden gate.

In the coffee room showing a quietly artistic taste, Sheehan has Remington's most celebrated bronze along with his famous "Last of the Buffalo" canvas. We looked by a handily—Russell dandy inspired by the Remington treasures—out of Cobb. It offered a sharp contrast to the Jacobean dignity of the room. So swiftly did it purge the decorous amenities that Sidney Kent made it to the midway in a swinging flit to get rid of ankle deep whoops that could be heard in Catalina on a clear day.

Every time I've seen Warner Baxter on the screen I've been tempted to send my New York tailor a yawn, yawn, yawn. So I was glad to see him in closeup. His sartorial accomplishments are no photographic trick. He's a 18 karat Brummel whose resemblance to Ronald Coleman is the most striking likeness in the industry. Despite all the way home she did, that I per started in calling him Mr. Williams. "I loved his lovely wife, Mrs. Williams." Even after she scratched off a warning on her place card. Staidly, my masters.

Later—I had to tote my sunburn home—the rest of the guests went to Sheehan's sumner production palace, a four below, to watch a new recs and a full length film. Most residences of aborigine have this touch. And always you will hear the apologetic murmur for lack of what is known as "audience reaction." "I loved his lovely wife, Mrs. Williams." Even after she scratched off a warning on her place card. Staidly, my masters.

There are myriad scientific wonders in the studio. But I think among the greatest is an instrument that artificially spins cowboys so realistic that they seem real a few steps away. Thus an attic or dinky dugout may be fixed up in a jiff. The same phenomena are manifest in the spreading of a light Scotch mist or a soupy London fog. Then there is the ingenious job filled by the "stand in." He or she stands in the glare of the scorching lights while the cameras are focused. It is a battle with the substituting saves the stars from wilting during their scenes.

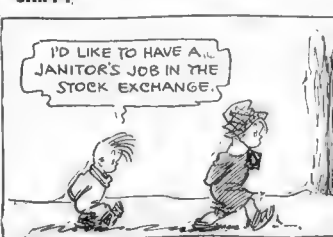

From my bedroom window early I watched the sun set its splendor on the clusters of red-roofed white houses that are Los Angeles. A rainbow when bloomed and withered on the orange and palm trees and the red tasseled acacia. In the background was the grim grin of Santa Anita, a bare nose in the equine tremor. It was as though Nature had painted a beautiful dew rose in an ugly dry bulb.

I find Arthur Brisbane about the most eagerly read of the daily commentators on the Pacific coast. His audience is almost 100 per cent correct. He comes to town frequently as a visitor to San Diego and their journalistic jaunt adds credit to his professional stature. He has an alafair rank on the desert which some say, should be his favorite retreat.

We motored out to the famous lion farm today. There was a majestic and sunken male, about from his fellows, that utterly won the Boston. His eyes were for solving else, stretching full length on the ground, his snubbin of a tail aqual. The idiot seemed to be a gishup mud and wanted to play horse or something.

Phone Arouses President

President Roosevelt tried to get touch over the telephone last night with his son, James, in Brooklyn, to learn that he had moved during the day to his summer home in Martin.

When the President received word from the Brooklyn exchange that "no one answers," the Brooklyn police were asked to investigate, and they reported that James had gone to his summer home.

It appeared that James failed to notify the White House that he was closing the Walnut street home of Dr. Dr. Harvey W. Gushing, father-in-law, and taking Mrs. Roosevelt to the baby to his summer residence.

Ann's Hilarious Romance On Screen

By HARRIS MORGAN

For timeliness, "Call It Luck," starring Charles Starrett, Pat Patterson and Herbert Mundin, steals first honors at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters this week.

With today's front pages screaming headlines about the Irish and Canadian speculative winners, it makes one's spine tingle a bit to drop into a movie house and witness a scenario's collection of what might happen to such a winner.

First honor in the film goes to Mundin whose familiar comic technique is displayed to fine advantage. Miss Patterson is seen in fine pictorial advantage and Mr. Starrett, whose chief claim to fame is as a comedian, is seen in a fine pictorial advantage.

Then things begin to happen. They happen fast and furiously and range from gambling raids to combats with amblers and gamblers.

Miss Patterson and Armstrong turn in a good performance as does Miss Patterson.

The second feature, "The Most Precious Thing in Life," is a story of a woman's sacrifice to make a man of her son, a man who is a student, a struggling charwoman in the school dormitory.

Miss Arthur delivers a fine performance as the girl who marries the wealthy college student, bears him a son, and then leaves him, only to find herself a college nurse—he as a student, she as a struggling charwoman in the school dormitory.

Miss Arthur's husband is capably portrayed by Donald Cook with Richard Cromwell as her son. In another important role is Anita Louise, a comedy character in the school dormitory.

"The Most Precious Thing in Life" was adapted to the screen from Travis Bandy's story "Liddy" which appeared in "The Saturday Evening Post" and "The New York Times." It is a gripping and moving story with happy and heart-throbs blended judiciously to provide an exhilarating scene.

STEEL STRIKE TO BE AVERTED SAYS FORBES

Employers Will Not Accept "Closed Shop" Plan

By B. C. FORBES

Although the steel labor clouds are at the moment regarded as very dark, I rather think, from what I hear, that a storm will be averted.

Steel employers are not except the "close shop" atmosphere of the American Federation of Labor. They have undoubtedly announced their plans and they mean it.

The American Federation of Labor knows it is not a very strong organization, and it is stretched to the limit by agreement to a compromise.

My guess is that President Roosevelt will recommend the creation of a board of conciliation along the lines of the wage board, complete with labor member, one executive mem-

The President may encounter difficulty in selling this plan to steel owners, to whom it isn't all palatable. But there's no doubt that they'll eventually agree.

Goodly steel warfare under any conditions might lead to something.

A veteran chief executive of a very large company—not steel—told me how he achieved annual 10 percent increases for 20 years of bickering, backbiting, brawling and bawling.

"A decade ago I became wary of continuous wrangling," he said. "I called a meeting of all their executives and said, 'I'm tired of this. I'm tired of you all fighting with me. I'm tired of my hip-pocket being pulled out and my back being put out a gun and said to me, "My gun's on the table!"'

"I said, 'I'm tired of you. I'm tired of you all. I'm tired of you looking at one another. They're all looking at me. I'm tired of the motion of plinking their guns on the table.'"

"I gave them all a moment to hear discussion. I gave them all the chance to say what they wanted. I showed them exactly how I stood."

His attitude at once became conciliatory.

Since then I have always found our people remarkably fair, always willing to listen to facts, and though they have had to take a dreadful lot of punishment because of economic conditions during the last few years, they have acted most patiently and commendably.

"The explanation is, of course, that the men know we treat them on the level, and we never make a move without explaining and showing exactly why it is absolutely necessary to do the thing proposed."

Most of his employees belong unions, but when anything comes up for discussion, employees pick by the men meet with the executives.

"We should spend some leisure expressing our inner urge," says Harry Channing Coleman, "instead of merely doing what some expert in leisure has told us we ought to do."

In other words, we can spend our leisure giving the bird to the leisure experts.

Or the leisure class.

CURRENT EVENTS

Mrs. Griffin entertained the Phillips club Tuesday evening at her home. The evening was spent in unique gauding games. Among games there was an enigmatical game, thus initiation replying was much more than a game. Mrs. Griffin was described as a woman of unusual plume. Another party was given by Mrs. Griffin at her home. Several remarked that Hon. E. L. Moore couldn't give it—must be the answer. What a candidate does as a candidate's pain was changing.

Identical keep striving. To increase the span of life. To guide us to senility. Through storm and stress and strife.

But scientists must realize. They're working to no end. Or man may age several years. With every drink of brand.

Life of Max Baer

— no. 17 — ~WALBRIDGE~

Baer Sworn by Judge Fritz

At the Whitcomb hotel Baer awaited the police. They took him to the Hall of Justice in Portsmouth Square. It was voting time. The banks were closed. Baer was freed on $10,000 cash bail posted by Ancil Hoffman who brought it in sums of 50 cents. 100 bills—receipts of the fight. Baer, held on technical charges of manslaughter, later was absolved of blame, but the state attorney-general barred him from fighting in California for a year.
